Paul Villinski has a lifelong concern for environmental issues, and this is reflected in the work he creates. Villinski's work often repurposes discarded materials, such as found beer cans. He turns these into wondrous creations. Metaphors of flight and soaring also often appear in his work, as evident by his use of butterflies.

Villinski's work is permanently displayed in numerous museums, including the Museum of Arts and Design in New York; the New Orleans Museum of Art; the Virginia Museum of Fine Art in Richmond; the Miami International Airport; the Museum of Contemporary Art in Jacksonville, FL; and the University of Michigan Mott Children's and Von Voitlander Women's Hospital in Ann Arbor, MI.

Publications featuring Villinski's work include ARTnews, Artforum, Art in America, Sculpture, Interior Design, Design Bureau, New York Magazine, ID, The New York Times, Wall Street Journal, Los Angeles Times, Washington Post, Houston Chronicle, International Herald Tribune, Village Voice, Seattle Times, New Haven Register, Toronto Star, and the Times-Picayune.
